If you know something, then share it.

If you have an opinion, than share it.

If you have experience, then share it.

Discussion forums only work if growers have the gumption or whatever you want to call it to chime in. This is the time of the year we should all be exploring ideas and helping each other out. There. I've done it. The NUDGE.

Today, in Trumansburg, NY, it is 50F, windy and no snow. Even the grass looks green. I know we still have a long way to go before winter is over (according to the calendar), but we're certainly in for more of a ride this year than last. Up/down temps, unseasonable December, massive blizzard further south. I have been growing fruit for 31 years and there has never been a dull moment. Here comes #32.
